1 . Main changes

- In 2025, 23 items have been added to the basket for the Consumer Prices Index including owner occupiers' housing costs (CPIH) and 15 items have been removed, resulting in a total of 752 items in the 2025 basket.
- The same changes have been made to the Consumer Prices Index (CPI) and Retail Prices Index (RPI) baskets.
- Additions include virtual reality (VR) headsets, men's sliders, exercise mats, pre-cooked pulled pork, and fixed tariffs for domestic gas and electricity.
- Removals include oven-ready joints, newspaper adverts and in-store cafeteria meals.

2 . Overview of basket update

The contents of the baskets for 2025 are summarised in Annexes A and B of the accompanying dataset, and the main changes from last year are discussed in this article and listed in Tables 2 and 3 of the same dataset.

The shopping basket

Consumer price inflation is the rate at which the prices of goods and services bought by households rise or fall. Imagine a large "shopping basket" containing those goods and services. As the prices of the various items change over time, so does the total cost of the basket. Movements in consumer price indices represent this change.

Within each calendar year, the basket contents are fixed so that changes in the indices from month to month reflect only changes in prices, and not variations in the quality and quantity of items purchased.

However, the contents of the basket and associated expenditure weights are updated annually. This is important in helping to avoid potential biases that might otherwise develop, for example, because of the development of entirely new goods and services. These procedures also help to ensure that the indices reflect longer-term trends in consumer spending.

Changes to the items and associated weights are introduced in the February index each year, but prices are collected for both old and new items in January. This means that the figures for each year can be "chain linked" to form a long-run price index spanning many years. In other words, price changes between December and January are based on the old basket, while price changes between January and subsequent months are based on the new basket.

There are slightly different baskets for the Consumer Prices Index including owner occupiers' housing costs (CPIH), Consumer Prices Index (CPI) and Retail Prices Index (RPI), but the vast majority of items are the same in all three.

Our Consumer price indices, a brief guide: 2017 introduces the concepts and procedures underpinning the indices. These are described in detail in our Consumer Prices Indices Technical Manual, 2019 and our CPIH Compendium.

Representative items

There are some individual goods and services where spending is so large that they merit inclusion in the baskets in their own right, such as petrol. More commonly, a sample of specific goods and services must be selected that gives a reliable measure of price movements for a range of similar items.

Several factors are considered when choosing representative items, including:

- ease of finding and pricing the product
- availability throughout the year
- amount spent on a particular item or group of items
- variability of prices within a class
- an analysis of the balance across the basket

The allocation of items to groups can be analysed using a combination of weight and variability to help decide whether more items are needed in a particular part of the basket. Table 1 includes summary information, though the analysis is conducted at a finer level of detail.

Notes

1. Based on an analysis of variation in price changes between the individual items chosen to represent each division in the period 2020 to 2024. Improvements to the analysis have been made since our Consumer price inflation basket of goods and services: 2022 article so the latest information should only be compared with the 2023 and 2024 analyses.
2. These figures should be treated as providing only a broad indication of the allocation of items to the 12 CPIH divisions. For example, the sample of prices underpinning an existing item might easily be stratified in some way to form two or more distinct items; conversely, items could be merged to form a single item representing a wider, more heterogeneous, spending category. A specific example of this is the item "UK university tuition fees". This is classified as one item, but the index takes into account prices for undergraduate, postgraduate and part-time courses. A more extreme example would be rail fares in the UK, which are covered by six items but, given the transaction data underlying the series, could be stratified in many detailed ways.
3. The sum of the percentages may not equal 100 because of rounding.

This analysis cannot tell us which items should be priced, so choosing a set of items to represent each area remains a matter of judgement.

Various sources of information are used to review and update the baskets, including our Living Costs and Food Survey, market research data, trade journals and press reports. Changes in retailing are also reported by the price collectors.

The basket contents and changes between years should be interpreted only as representative items used in estimating consumer price changes. Additions and removals should not be viewed as a simple indicator of increased or reduced popularity.

3 . Changes to the baskets in 2025

Timing of changes

Changes to the baskets of goods and services are being introduced with the February 2025 consumer price statistics published on 26 March 2025.

Additions to baskets

As in previous years, developments in technology influence the basket updates and for 2025, a virtual reality (VR) headset has been introduced. Expenditure on this item has increased over recent years and is reported to have reached around £350m in 2024. Adding the item ensures the basket represents an emerging technology. It also improves our coverage of data processing and peripheral equipment.

Several new items have been introduced to represent specific markets where consumer spending is substantial or growing, and existing items may not adequately represent price changes. For example, men's sliders or pool sandals have been added to reflect a growing area of the footwear market for men. This will improve our representation of that market and add to the range of footwear items more generally.

We are introducing two items in response to the growing prevalence of fixed gas and electricity tariffs, which offer consumers a constant standing charge and unit rate for a set period. The new items account for the experiences of both consumers signing up to fixed tariffs in the current month, and consumers who signed up in previous months, with rolling-average bills used to produce the item indices.

Initially, the items will reflect tariffs of around 1 year in duration, so 12-month rolling averages will be used. A similar process is used in the existing mobile phone charges item, more details of which are available in Section 9.5.6.3 of the Consumer Prices Indices Technical Manual. These new items add to the variable rate tariffs for gas and electricity, which are already included in the baskets.

Some new items have been introduced to diversify the range of products collected for already established groupings. For example, ready-to-use noodles, cushions, and exercise mats have been introduced to expand representation in the relevant areas. Ready-to-use noodles add to the dried products already included and provide a better balance for the range of products available. Cushions improve our coverage of lounge furnishings and add to bedding, towels and curtains, which are already in the household textiles section of the baskets. Exercise mats increase the range of sports products. They became more popular when people started to exercise at home during the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic and their use has continued in organised exercise classes.

Analysis of the broad balance of representative items across the Consumer Prices Index including owner occupiers' housing costs (CPIH) highlighted a need to improve coverage across some categories, including accommodation services. This class includes an overnight hotel accommodation item, which is priced the day before the nominal overnight stay. Prices for this item tend to exhibit sharp movements potentially because of short-term demand fluctuations.

A second overnight hotel accommodation item is being introduced, which will be priced further in advance. The aim is that more rooms will be available for pricing and that the short-term demand pressures will have less of an effect on price. Additionally, the weight of the existing item will be split across the two. The aim is to reduce the volatility in the accommodation services series and aid interpretation.

In other cases, new items are direct replacements for the same or similar products, for example, because of a change in the market. This year, pre-cooked pulled pork replaces an oven-ready gammon or pork joint, which has fallen in popularity because of the rise in convenience cooking. The new item reflects that trend. We have also updated our confectionery sample, replacing some branded products and a bag of (non-chocolate) sweets with a bag of soft sweets and a bag of hard sweets. The additions should better represent the whole market, including for example, toffees and jellied sweets. The new items will be priced in the existing smaller outlets, as well as in larger supermarkets, to better represent where consumer expenditure occurs.

Removals from baskets

It is important that growth in the overall size of the baskets is limited each year so that production costs and processing times are contained. Therefore, several items have been removed in 2025. In some cases, this reflects low or decreasing expenditure, such as on newspaper adverts, which in turn reflects the continuing shift towards online communication.

In other cases, items have been removed to make way for new additions within the same grouping. For example, an NHS dental charges item has been replaced by NHS dental charges for routine check-ups and NHS dental charges for other services. The item is being subdivided in anticipation of a move to an updated classification system for compiling and analysing CPIH and CPI.

Elsewhere, analysis suggested that there was scope to remove items from certain groupings without any substantial loss of precision in estimates of overall price change, for example, fresh diced or minced turkey and in-store cafeteria meals. The turkey item was one of the lowest-weighted items within the meat class and the lowest-weighted within poultry.

The in-store cafeteria meal was in the "over-represented" restaurants and cafes class. This item was originally introduced into the baskets to reflect casual impulse dining in, for example, department stores. The prevalence of these outlets has dropped over recent years, while there has been an increase in other casual dining outlets whose prices are already reflected in the existing restaurants and cafes class.

4 . Methodological changes

Consumption segments and items

The "all items" consumer price indices incorporate price information for a wide range of goods and services. From March 2025, the process for aggregating this detailed information has changed. This is a necessary step towards incorporating larger and more detailed datasets into the indices.

Goods and services are allocated into "consumption segments" for different categories of expenditure. In some cases, these consumption segments correspond precisely to specific "items" for which we track prices over time. However, in cases where more comprehensive source data are available, or expected to be available in the future, a consumption segment will typically include much more than just one item. For simplicity, we will continue to refer to "items" in the monthly bulletin and detailed briefing note. More detailed methods information is available in our Impact analysis on transformation of UK consumer price statistics: January 2025 article.

Other methodological changes

The mobile phone applications (apps) price index was previously based on the price of apps in specific chart positions, as opposed to the price of specific apps. From the February 2025 index, we will collect the prices of specific products.

The Northern Ireland component of our private rents and owner occupiers' housing costs series has previously been based on our standard data collection processes. From the February 2025 index, we will use the Price Index for Private Rents. This source is already used for the Great Britain components.

Table 2: Additions to the baskets in 2025

CPIH/CPI Class	RPI Section	New Item	Notes
1.1.1 Bread and cereals	2102 Cereals	Ready-to-use noodles	Bread and cereals are under-represented in the baskets at present so ready-to-use noodles are being included to improve the overall measure of price change. They are an alternative to the dried products in this part of the basket and improve coverage and representation of consumer purchasing patterns.
1.1.2 Meat	2107 Pork	Pre-cooked pulled pork	This replaces an existing oven-ready gammon or pork joint in the baskets. Oven-ready joints have fallen in popularity due to the rise of convenience cooking. This new item reflects that trend and is more widely available for pricing than the joint.
1.1.3 Fish	2112 Processed fish	Smoked salmon	A new item added to represent smoked fish in the baskets. It also helps meet the future change to a new classification system used to compile and analyse CPIH and CPI.
1.1.6 Fruit	2127 Fresh fruit	Mango	A new item added to an under-represented area of the baskets. This is the most popular fruit which is currently not included in our price collection. It also improves the representation of stone fruit.
1.1.8 Sugar, jam, syrups, chocolate and confectionery	2122 Sweets and chocolates	Bag of hard sweets	The confectionery class has been updated to better represent items with a higher spend and ensure the price collection reflects large supermarkets as well as the smaller outlets. As part of this, the existing bag of non-chocolate sweets item has been split into two – a bag of hard sweets and a bag of soft sweets.
1.1.8 Sugar, jam, syrups, chocolate and confectionery	2122 Sweets and chocolates	Bag of soft sweets	As above, the existing bag of non-chocolate sweets item has been split into a bag of hard sweets and a bag of soft sweets.

1.1.8 Sugar, jam, syrups, chocolate and confectionery	2122 Sweets and chocolates	Bag of chocolate sweets	A bag of branded chocolate sweets was already included in the baskets but the price collection changed to reflect large supermarkets as well as the smaller outlets. For technical processing reasons, this change requires a new item to be assigned while maintaining the essence of the replaced item. The new item is no longer restricted to branded products to better match the products stocked.
1.1.8 Sugar, jam, syrups, chocolate and confectionery	2122 Sweets and chocolates	Carton/box of chocolates	As above, replacing the existing carton or box of chocolates item. The previous item had increasingly low coverage in small independent retailers as they cannot hold the same depth of range.
3.1.2 Garments	5102 Women's outerwear	Women's dress	A second dress has been added to the baskets to improve coverage in an under-represented area and split a relatively high weighted item.
3.2 Footwear including repairs	5105 Footwear	Men's walking/hiking boots	This replaces adult walking or hiking boots and better meets a breakdown of the footwear category by gender, a requirement of the international classification system used to compile and analyse CPIH and CPI.
3.2 Footwear including repairs	5105 Footwear	Women's canvas fashion shoes/trainers	As above, replacing adult canvas fashion shoes or trainers in the baskets.
3.2 Footwear including repairs	5105 Footwear	Men's sliders/pool sandals	Men's sliders have been added to represent a rapidly growing and previously unrepresented area of the footwear market.
4.3.1 Materials for maintenance and repair	4106 Do-it-yourself materials	Wallpaper	Replacing the existing wallpaper item, which had low coverage in terms of the number of price quotes, due to restrictions in the outlets available for price collection. The item definition is unchanged but for technical processing reasons, a new item has been assigned in order to allow a wider range of outlets to be used.
4.5.1 Electricity	4202 Electricity	Electricity, fixed tariff	A new item introduced in response to the growing prevalence of fixed tariffs which offer consumers a constant standing charge and unit rate for a set period, thereby reducing some of the uncertainty in energy bills.

4.5.2 Gas	4203 Gas	Gas, fixed tariff	As above, a new item for fixed tariff gas.
5.2 Household textiles	4302 Furnishings	Cushion	This new item will broaden the range of products priced in the soft furnishings area, particularly lounge furnishings.
6.2.2 Dental services	5203 Personal services	NHS dental charges for routine preventative check-ups	The existing NHS dental charges item is being subdivided in anticipation of a future move to an updated classification system used to compile and analyse CPIH and CPI. Under the new system, NHS dental charges are broken down into routine check-ups and other services such as fitting of crowns and tooth extraction.
6.2.2 Dental services	5203 Personal services	NHS dental charges for other outpatient services	As above.
9.1.3 Data processing equipment	6301 Audio-visual equipment	Virtual reality (VR) headset	This item has attracted increased expenditure as companies release new products onto the market. Expenditure is reported to have reached around £350m in 2024. Adding this will ensure that the baskets represent a rapidly emerging technology and provide additional coverage in an under-represented area.
9.3.2 Equipment for sport and open-air recreation	6303 Toys, photographic and sports goods	Exercise mat	This item will increase the range of sports represented. Its usage has grown considerably since the pandemic, when people started to exercise at home and have continued in organised exercise classes.
9.4.2 Cultural services	6401 Television licences and rentals	Video on demand subscription services	This replaces the existing item covering the DVD rental/video on demand subscription services market. The new item excludes the DVD rental element, as expenditure there is relatively low.
11.2 Accommodation services	6404 UK holidays	Overnight hotel accommodation, advance price	The existing overnight hotel accommodation item, which is priced the day before the nominal overnight stay, exhibits one of the most volatile price series in the baskets. The new item will be priced further in advance so that more rooms should be available for price collection and the rates may not be subject to such short-term demand pressures. The weight of the existing item will be split between the two. The aim is to reduce the volatility in the existing accommodation services price series thereby aiding interpretation.

Table 3: Items removed from the baskets in 2025

(1. "low weighted" denotes an item with a CPIH weight of less than 0.5 parts per thousand in 2024.)

CPIH/CPI Class	RPI Section	Dropped Item	Notes
1.1.2 Meat	2109 Poultry	Fresh diced/minced turkey	Analysis has shown that this area of the basket is "over-represented" so there is scope to remove an item without any significant loss of precision in the overall estimate of price change. Fresh diced or minced turkey has been removed since it was one of the lowest weighted items in the class.
1.1.2 Meat	2110 Other meat	Oven ready, gammon/pork joint	This item has been replaced by pre-cooked pulled pork as consumer preferences are reported to have moved to pre-cooked products which can be incorporated into a meal in less time. Our coverage of the oven ready joint, in terms of the number of price quotes collected each month, has started to fall indicating reduced availability.
1.1.8 Sugar, jam, syrups, chocolate and confectionery	2122 Sweets and chocolates	Bag of sweets, not chocolate	The confectionery class has been reviewed and updated to better represent the market in terms of the items and the locations where they're bought. The bag of non-chocolate sweets and two previously included branded products have been removed from the baskets, replaced by a bag of soft sweets and a bag of hard sweets. Together the additions cover all aspects of the non-chocolate market, for example, toffees and jellies.
1.1.8 Sugar, jam, syrups, chocolate and confectionery	2122 Sweets and chocolates	Carton/box of chocolates	A carton or box of chocolates remains in the baskets but the price collection will now encompass a wider range of outlets. Availability of the item in smaller outlets was inconsistent and the aim of changing is to improve the number of quotes collected each month.
1.1.8 Sugar, jam, syrups, chocolate and confectionery	2122 Sweets and chocolates	Bag of branded chocolate sweets	As above. The new item is not restricted to branded products to better match the products stocked.

3.2 Footwear including repairs	5105 Footwear	Walking/hiking boots	The adult walking boots item has been replaced by men's walking boots to better meet a breakdown of the footwear category by gender, a requirement of the international classification system used to compile and analyse CPIH and CPI.
3.2 Footwear including repairs	5105 Footwear	Adult canvas fashion shoes/trainers	Similar to the walking boots, the adult canvas fashion shoes are being replaced by women's canvas fashion shoes.
4.3.1 Materials for maintenance and repair	4106 Do-it-yourself materials	Wallpaper	Wallpaper remains in the baskets but the outlets where prices are taken changes in order to improve the number of price quotes collected. A new item has to be assigned for technical processing reasons.
6.2.2 Dental services	5203 Personal services	NHS dental charges	The existing dental charges item is being broken down into routine check-ups and other dental services to meet the requirements of an updated classification system for compiling and analysing CPIH and CPI.
9.4.2 Cultural services	6401 Television licences and rentals	DVD rental/video on demand subscription services	DVD rental has such low expenditure that this item has been replaced by one reflecting just video on demand subscription services.
11.1.1 Restaurants and cafes	2201 Restaurant meals	In store cafeteria meal	Restaurants and cafes is an "over-represented" part of the basket. The in store cafeteria meal was originally introduced to reflect casual impulse dining in, for example, department stores. However, the prevalence of these outlets has dropped with many store closures. There has also been an increase in casual dining outlets on the high street whose prices are already reflected in the restaurants and cafes class.
12.7 Other services (not elsewhere covered)	4402 Fees and subscriptions	Newspaper advert	Adverts are usually placed online rather than in local newspapers reflecting the continuing shift towards the online world. Anecdotal evidence is that many of these sales take place through social media platforms rather than with local newspapers.

Annex A: Consumer price indices, CPIH and CPI: representative items in 2025

01.1 Food

01.1.1 Bread and Cereals

Large white loaves - sliced and unsliced	Large wholemeal loaf
Bread rolls	Gluten free bread
Wraps/tortillas	Garlic bread
Flour	Rice
Pasta	Dehydrated noodles/pasta
